

GENERATING INCOME FOR NON-PROFITS: A SOCIAL ENTERPRISE COURSE

ABOUT TEACH A MAN TO FISH

Set up in 2006, Teach A Man To Fish is a world leader in entrepreneurship education. Through our programmes, we equip educators in school and out of school settings to help young people gain business and life skills through real youth-led businesses. By participating in the planning and running of a real business, children and young people develop a range of essential life skills and experience.

TRAINING AND CONSULTANCY SERVICES

Teach A Man To Fish has 15 years of experience in Training and Consultancy, working with a range of clients including NGOs and educational institutions around the world, building their capacity in entrepreneurship education, business development, and financial sustainability.

THE SOCIAL ENTERPRISE COURSE FOR NON-PROFITS

Drawing on our global network of experts and experience, Teach A Man To Fish is well placed to support non-profit organisations to improve their sustainability through the generation of new income streams that can support their social mission.

This is a flexible course designed to meet the needs of each individual and organisation taking part - there is no official start date, so participants begin their entrepreneurial journey when it suits them. Our instructors work collaboratively with participants and keep them accountable throughout the course, finding a schedule that suits them and creating a personalised plan for success. Participants benefit from our unique approach combining group and individual coaching, Q&A sessions, online support available at all times, and an international community of like-minded peers participating in the course.

This Course was a perception changer for me; I haven't had any lessons like this one before now.
